If you think that all of the highlights happen just at the track, then you have not had the pleasure of attending this event. Saturday night's dinner was hosted at the Siebkens Resort in downtown Elkhart Lake, Wisconsin. If you've been, I don't need to say more... But if you have not, Elkhart Lake is a town with a population of 974. It has two (that I know of) wonderful, old resorts, Siebkens and the Osthoff Lake Resort. Everything is within walking distance. And yes, there is a lovely lake accessible from both resorts. Road America is a short two miles away.

On Saturday, just before dusk, the police opened up Gate 5 and escorted the Porsche race cars onto the original 1950s Old Road Course. The race cars traveled from Road America to downtown Elkhart Lake, where they joined the already-in-progress Concours 4 (Chicago Region). The streets surrounding Siebkens became a showcase of absolutely beautiful Porsches!

It was a spectacular site to see. Standing in front of Siebkens, you could hear the thunderous sounds as the cars left the track and headed for town. Hundreds showed up for the banquet. Whether you grabbed a plate and wandered amongst the cars, sat down in the large tent or at the Siebken's Tavern to eat, you were sure to find friendly people enjoying the wonderful evening.

Here is a little information about Road America itself. It is one of the finest and oldest road courses in North America. In 1950 the SCCA and the Village of Elkhart Lake organized the first road race in Elkhart Lake, using the local roads. Historical signs mark several locations along that original route. After three years of using county roads, this type of racing was banned and had to be moved to private tracks. In 1955, Road America came into being, and the current four-mile, 14-turn course has changed little since that time.

This 640-acre facility is a park-like setting in Wisconsin's Kettle Moraine. You need to see it to appreciate the beauty. One other note: The Gearbox serves some of the best track food I've ever tasted...
